Festejo imprevisto de los nadadores australianos en los Juegos Olímpicos de París

Después de que el relevo femenino de Australia ganara la plata en la última carrera de la competencia de natación en los Juegos Olímpicos de París, el equipo se unió para una celebración espontánea. Los nadadores saltaron a la piscina completamente vestidos después de la ceremonia de entrega de medallas.

La escena fue conmovedora, inspirada por Kaylee McKeown, la nadadora australiana más exitosa, quien fue acompañada por Emma McKeon, la nadadora australiana más condecorada, Mollie O'Callaghan y su compañera Jenna Strauch.

Una idea de último momento

"Esa fue mi idea", dijo McKeown. "Solo vi la piscina y pensé: '¿por qué no?'. Para McKeon, quien se retirará después de los Juegos, fue un momento memorable. "Definitivamente fue una de las cosas más divertidas que he hecho en los Juegos Olímpicos", dijo la seis veces medallista de oro. "Estoy feliz de que lo hayamos hecho".

Poco tiempo para celebrar

Aparte del tiempo inesperado en la piscina, el equipo de los delfines no tiene mucho tiempo para celebrar. El equipo se reunió informalmente el domingo por la noche y comenzó una sesión de evaluación al día siguiente. Desde allí, los nadadores seguirán sus propios caminos. Kyle Chalmers tiene una fiesta de compromiso planificada en Noruega; McKeown tiene unas vacaciones reservadas en Dubrovnik, Croacia; McKeon y Elijah Winnington tomarán una semana de descanso antes de asistir a la ceremonia de clausura en París.

Mirando al futuro

Para el personal de entrenadores, incluidos el jefe Rohan Taylor, la atención ya se ha centrado en cómo la fábrica de medallas olímpicas de Australia puede continuar su éxito en los próximos cuatro años. "Analizaremos con el equipo esta mañana", dijo Taylor. "Miraremos dónde podemos mejorar, dónde podemos ser mejores, queremos hacer eso".

Un éxito notable

El éxito de Australia en la pileta en París, incluidas siete medallas de oro, es notable. Es el tercer mejor resultado del equipo en cualquier Juegos, detrás de solo Tokio 2024 y Melbourne 1956, y junto a Atenas 2004.

Entrenador jefe Rohan Taylor con miembros de su equipo en una conferencia de prensa posterior a la competencia de natación en los Juegos Olímpicos de París.

Un camino difícil

El entrenador Taylor ha estado en el viaje. Fue entrenador en Londres y Río, antes de ser ascendido para liderar al equipo antes de Tokio. En los últimos meses, cuando Taylor es preguntado sobre el secreto detrás del éxito de los delfines, Taylor habla sobre convertir oportunidades. Un hecho olvidado sobre Londres 2012 es que los australianos ganaron seis medallas de plata; si solo la mitad de ellas hubieran sido de oro, los delfines habrían terminado en el tercer lugar del medallero, no exactamente un desastre.

"Hemos dirigido nuestros recursos a los lugares más importantes que se requieren", dijo Taylor el lunes, "que son el apoyo a los atletas, el apoyo a los entrenadores, el entorno de entrenamiento, asegurándonos de que los atletas, entrenadores y personal de apoyo al rendimiento tengan lo que necesitan para diseñar un buen resultado de rendimiento".
