Santa Sé protests formally to France after judgment of French

ROMA - The Holy See protested formally to France after a French court considered that an ex-high official of the Vatican was responsible for the dismissal of a nun from a religious order.

Resumo:

In a statement, the Holy See considered the judicial decision a "serious violation" of religious freedom, a fact that it received notification about in no form. The investigation that resulted in the dismissal of Mother Superior Sabine de la Valette, also known as Sister Maria Ferréol, was led by Cardinal Marc Ouellet when he was the head of the general secretariat of the Episcopate, in the City of the Vatican. The religious order affected, the Order of the Dominicans of the Holy Spirit, and other aggrieved parties appealed against the court's decision, which could have diplomatic consequences due to the immunity of Cardinal Ouellet.

Detalhes do caso:

The French court determined that the expulsion of the nun was without justification and ordered Ouellet, the religious order and other aggrieved parties to pay more than €200,000 in material and moral damages, in addition to fines. According to the communication channels, Sister Ferréol served the order for 34 years before being forced to resign due to an investigation suggested by the order itself.

Investigações internas

Internal investigations of the Holy See are conducted to solve management problems, financial abuses, sexual abuses and other abuses or problems of governance related exclusively to the internal life of the Catholic Church. The process in the French court represents, therefore, an unusual intervention of secular justice in the internal affairs of the Church.
